Central Social Welfare Board : The Central Social Welfare Board was established in 1953 to serve as an instrument for promoting programmes for the welfare of women and children and to mitigate the neglect and suffering of the socially and physically handicapped sections of the society. The programmes of the Board aimed at promoting and coordinating social services. For this, a two-pronged strategy was devised, of creating and reinforcing a nation-wide network of NGOs and State Social Welfare Boards and of channelizing welfare resources and services through these NGOs to beneficiaries at the grass-root level. State Boards have not been assigned legal status despite the PAC recommendations in this regard. Forty-nine years of existence of the Central Board has hardly made a dent on the condition of the deprived and disadvantaged sections of the society. Persistent weaknesses in the Central and State Boards have resulted in errant NGOs misusing funds. No action has been taken against such NGOs even though the programmes/schemes failed to yield desired results for which the funds had been given to them. The technical competence of NGOs with regard to the schemes and the quality of services offered by them has never been critically examined before their selection. This has resulted in unsatisfactory delivery of services leading to a high incidence of failure of the welfare schemes. One of the main function assigned to the Central Board at the time of its inception was to coordinate the social welfare activities of various Ministries/Departments of Central and State Governments. This has become redundant as there are a number of programmes/schemes being run by different Ministries/ Departments for the welfare of women, children and the handicapped parallel to those of the Central Board. It is time to reassess the need for continuance of various activities of the Central Board.
